Summary of contents

Analyses of information on the costs of attending different types of postsecondary institutions: Eighteen tables present data indicating average expenses for resident students, both those living in campus housing and those in private housing; commuting students; and self-supporting students. The tables also provide data showing how postsecondary educational expenses are changing and how expenses vary by College Board region.

Some of the findings:

- The overall increase in total expenses for resident students at all types of institutions from 1977-78 to 1978-79 averages about 6 percent (at four-year public institutions, 5.3 percent, and at four-year private institutions, 6.1 percent).
- The increase in tuition and fees from 1977-78 to 1978-79 is 4.8 percent at public four-year institutions and 6.9 percent at four-year private institutions.
- The difference in total expenses for on-campus resident students and commuter students is under $600.
- The difference in the tuition and fees between private and public institutions is $1,522 for two-year institutions and $1,996 for four-year institutions.
- Total expenses minus tuition and fees do not vary substantially by institutional type and control.

A listing of student expenses at approximately 2,750 postsecondary institutions across the United States as reported by the institutions, arranged by state.

An alphabetical list of all postsecondary institutions in this book.

The College Scholarship Service (CSS) is an activity of the College Board, concerned with improving equal educational opportunity. The CSS through the determination of financial need assists in the equitable distribution of financial assistance to students. Its services are offered to students and their parents, to secondary schools, to noncollegiate sponsors of financial aid programs, and to all institutions of postsecondary education. Operational activities for the College Scholarship Service are performed by Educational Testing Service.

The College Board is a nonprofit membership organization that provides tests and other educational services for students, schools, and colleges. The membership is composed of more than 2,000 colleges, schools, school systems, and education associations.

Introduction

The growing need for information on expenses at postsecondary institutions

While the most important considerations in choosing a postsecondary institution are educational, a growing number of American families are concerned about educational costs. Not only lower-income families but also middle-income and upper-income families are finding it increasingly difficult to meet the costs of a college education. To cope with the problem of financing a college education, parents and students need to plan ahead. To do this effectively, information is needed about the cost of postsecondary education and the kinds of financial support available.

The purpose of this book is to provide information about the costs of pursuing education beyond high school at different institutions. To help meet these expenses, it is important for students who may lack the necessary financial resources to realize that there is help in the form of student financial aid. Much of the available financial aid is awarded on the basis of need. In order for postsecondary institutions to fairly assess the financial need of students, institutions must consider two major factors: (1) how much the family can afford to pay toward the cost of education beyond high school and (2) the expenses associated with attending a postsecondary institution. Meeting College Costs, another booklet prepared by the College Scholarship Service, provides a step-by-step outline parents and students can use to determine how much they can afford to spend for educational costs and also assists in figuring financial need.

Using this book

This book is divided into two sections. The introduction provides analyses of student-expense data on a nationwide basis. The main portion of the book lists student expenses at about 2,750 postsecondary institutions. (See page 1 for further explanation of the data collection procedure and a definition of terms.)

It should be remembered that the cost estimates listed were provided by the institutions themselves and are the figures typically used by these institutions in determining a student's expenses as part of the process of analyzing a student's financial need. Institutions generally have various student budgets that relate to such factors as where the student lives and the size of the student's family. Therefore, this book provides analyses for four different budget types: budgets for dependent resident students living on and off the campus, a budget for dependent commuting students, and one for self-supporting students. These budgets for the four different student categories represent average costs, and any individual student at an institution may have expenses that vary from these. But these expense figures can be useful, particularly in helping students, parents, and school counselors make preliminary estimates of financial need using the procedures given in Meeting College Costs and work out plans for financing postsecondary education.

The data provided in this book were collected by the College Scholarship Service (CSS), an activity of the College Entrance Examination Board, which assists postsecondary institutions, states, and federal agencies in determining how much financial need a particular student has at a particular institution. The CSS itself does not grant any financial assistance, but only helps parents and students who seek financial assistance to present their financial situation clearly and assists institutions in determining the student's financial need.

What is an expense budget?

A student expense budget is meant to be all-inclusive in order to provide for both direct educational and living expenses. The expense budget for the typical student at a postsecondary institution is made up of five principal parts: tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, personal expenses, and transportation. In determining an individual student's financial need, the institution will begin by determining a budget with these items and then consider other expenses that may be necessary such as medical care, debt repayment, extra expenses because of a handicap, etc. But the basic five items are generally included in the budgets used for all students.

Tuition and fees

Tuition is the institution's charge for instruction. Fees may be charged for such services as the library, the health center, the student center, and so on. While the actual instructional costs vary from one institution to another according to the curriculum, academic level, and type of educational program offered, the amount of tuition and fees charged students is more closely related to the kind of institution they are attending. As a general rule, tuition and fees at public institutions are the lowest, particularly for students who are legal residents of the state or district in which the institution is located. However, public institutions, both two-year and four-year, typically have an additional tuition charge for students who are not legal residents of the state or district. Having to pay this "out-of-state" or "out-of-district" (in the case of two-year community colleges) tuition may make the cost of attending a public institution as high as or higher than attending an independent or private institution.

Both public and private institutions generally set their tuition charges below the real costs of providing the educational instruction. But tuition charges at private institutions usually cover a larger percentage of the real costs so they are likely to be considerably higher than those of public institutions. Proprietary schools normally set their prices to cover all their own costs.

Table 1. Tuition and fees: 1978–79 expenses for 9 months

Type of institution	Mean
Public 2-year	$ 408
Private 2-year	1,930
Public 4-year	651
Private 4-year	2,647
Proprietary	2,038

Table 1 shows the estimated average tuition and fees for the 1978-79 academic year at public two- and four-year institutions, private two- and four-year institutions, and proprietary institutions. The amounts shown here for public institutions are the average amounts charged to students who are legal residents of the state or district in which the institution is located. A few public two-year institutions reported no tuition charge to students who were legal residents. However, more than 75 percent of the two-year public institutions have tuition and fee charges higher than $222, and 25 percent report tuition and fees of more than $514. Of the private two-year institutions 50 percent have tuition and fee charges between $1,443 and $2,424. Most (75 percent) of the public four-year institutions have tuition and fees over $476, and 25 percent have charges in excess of $799. The average additional out-of-state (or district) charges for public two- and four-year institutions are $755 and $997, respectively. Twenty-five percent of private four-year institutions report charges of $1,941 or less; at the other end of the scale 25 percent report tuition and fees above $3,232. Proprietary institutions report the greatest differences: 25 percent charge tuition of $477 or less, and 25 percent have costs of $2,420 or more.

Books and supplies

Every college student has to buy books, pencils, paper, and other supplies used in his or her studies. The amount a student spends for books and supplies varies only slightly by type of institution but is generally related to the curriculum or types of classes the student selects. Typically, art and engineering students must purchase relatively expensive supplies. For example, a course in engineering may require a student to purchase a desk-calculator. Most institutions have a campus bookstore where students can purchase the books and supplies they need, including those priced lower because they have been used previously by other students. The institutions in this survey indicate that the costs of books and supplies for full-time students attending classes for nine months during 1978-79 range from $197 to $230 (see Table 2).

Room and board

In constructing a student expense budget most institutions include living costs, which may vary depending on the student's choice of residence. The student may choose to live in an on-campus dormitory or other institutionally operated housing, in privately owned housing such as an apartment or rooming house near the campus, or at home with his or her parents. Students who do not live at home with their parents are typically referred to as resident students (not to be confused with the term "legal residents" used in the discussion of tuition and fees), and those living at home are called commuters. Institutions with on-campus housing have reported the rate charged to students who live in the college dormitory. This rate includes a room and most meals for nine months (except for holidays and vacation periods). Institutions with no dormitory facilities and those institutions that permit students to live in off-campus housing have provided data on the average costs to students who do not live at home or in a college dormitory but rather in private housing. These students must pay rent and buy their food. The costs depend on where the housing is located and whether the accommodations are shared, but off-campus housing costs generally exceed by at least $100 the amount charged to students who live in a college dormitory.

Commuting students, who live at home with their parents, generally do not have to spend as much for living costs as resident students because of the absence of housing charges. But families should remember that they will still need to buy food for the student and to pay for other normal living expenses. Since classes may start early in the morning and go on until late at night, commuters may have to buy at least one meal a day on campus and usually will spend additional amounts on snacks bought in the student center or restaurants around the campus.

Table 3 shows the amounts institutions estimate their resident and commuter students should plan to spend for room and board for the normal nine-month academic year in 1978-79. The room and board costs do not vary greatly for the different types of institutions; in particular the costs at four-year institutions are very similar. The study shows a difference of approximately $500 in room and board expenses estimated for the budgets of on-campus resident students versus that of commuting students.

Personal or other expenses

Personal or other expenses, sometimes called "miscellaneous," include items such as clothing, laundry, toothpaste and soap, recreation, medical insurance, and incidental furnishings for dormitory rooms. Many students think they can economize in this area, but, as Table 4 shows, the institutions uniformly estimate that resident students as well as commuter students will spend more than $425 for these items.

Transportation

Almost all students must spend some money for travel. Dependent students who stay on or near the campus must travel to get there at the start of the year and return home at the end of the year. Most resident students also go home at least once or twice during the year. For the purpose of establishing a budget to be used in determining a student's need, only the costs of two round trips home would be counted by most institutions. Students who live at home and commute to the campus have to pay almost daily transportation costs whether they use public transportation or private car. At some institutions, particularly those located in large cities, the cost of daily parking can be substantial. As Table 5 shows, all types of institutions estimate a larger amount for the average transportation expenses of commuter students than for residents. This additional amount is about $100; but in the case of public four-year institutions it is almost $200 more.

Putting it all together

In making a total expense budget, the five budget components discussed here are added together. Table 6 shows the average total expenses for resident and commuter students estimated by postsecondary institutions for the 1978-79 academic year. The lowest student budgets are found at public institutions. The major reason private and proprietary institutions have larger total expenses than public institutions is because of higher tuition and fees. This point is illustrated in Table 7. When all expenses except tuition and fees are considered, the variation in the costs of attendance at different types of institutions is not great, particularly for resident students living in private housing, where the maximum difference within the budget category is $84. Between public and private four-year institutions the differences in the costs of items other than tuition vary by less than $60 for each type of student budget.

Tables 8, 9, and 10 show the average budgets for resident and commuter students at the five different types of institutions. For resident students at public institutions the largest part of the budget is room and board—about 50 percent. At private institutions, tuition and fees account for the highest proportion of costs—between 45 and 52 percent of the total costs. For resident on-campus students at public four-year institutions, tuition and fees make up about 21 percent of their total expenditures (the same proportion as last year); books and supplies, 7 percent; room and board, 47 percent; transportation, 8 percent; and personal miscellaneous expenses, an additional 17 percent. Students who are campus residents at private four-year institutions spend 52 percent of their money on tuition and fees; 4 percent, books and supplies; 30 percent, room and board; 9 percent, personal miscellaneous expenses; and 5 percent, transportation.

Costs are changing

The total costs of a postsecondary education continue to go up. Costs increased by more than $150 for all types of institutions from 1977-78 to 1978-79 (see Table 11). The total budget increased least for resident students at four-year public institutions (5.3 percent). The increase is 6.1 percent for resident students at private four-year institutions. The greatest increase is at two-year private institutions, 7.8 percent.

For commuter students the increase in the total budget between 1977-78 and 1978-79, as shown in Table 12, is 4.8 percent for students attending public institutions. The increase is higher for private institutions.

Increases in tuition and fees

The increase in tuition and fees for public institutions is less than 5 percent; the increase at only the four-year public institutions is 4.8 percent (Table 13).

Viewed over the eight-year period, increases at public four-year institutions have amounted to 64.8 percent ($256). Tuition and fees at private four-year institutions rose 6.9 percent over last year or 74.5 percent since 1970-71.

The expenses of self-supporting students

So far the discussion has concerned the expenses of students who either live at home or live on or near the campus and who are dependent on their parents. Students who are not living at home, are not claimed by their parents for tax purposes, and do not receive more than $600 in financial support are generally called self-supporting. These students must typically provide for their own maintenance or living costs for a 12-month period. Therefore, the living expenses of self-supporting students are usually higher than for dependent students whose budgets are figured in most cases for nine months. Some institutions, for the purpose of determining a student's eligibility for financial aid, may use nine-month budgets for self-supporting students too.

Because self-supporting students have the responsibility for maintaining their own residence and frequently have dependents of their own, these students are more likely to have higher personal expenses than dependent students. They may also have such extra expenses as child care and outstanding debts that are not typical of the dependent student. Based on the data in this survey, the expenses of self-supporting students are larger than comparable expenses for dependent students for each of the three expense categories, excluding tuition and fees and books and supplies. The same charges for tuition and fees and books and supplies were used for dependent and self-supporting students, on the assumption that all students were attending classes for nine months.

As in the case of dependent students, the costs for those items other than tuition and fees are similar at the different types of institutions (Table 14). Room and board costs are about $1,000 greater for self-supporting students. The lowest expenses (excluding tuition and fees) for a 12-month period (1978-79) for self-supporting students are reported by the private two-year institutions and the highest by the public two-year institutions (Table 15). The increase in total costs for self-supporting students from 1977-78 to 1978-79 ranges from 5.4 percent ($231) at four-year public institutions to 13.6 percent ($684) at two-year private institutions (Table 16).

Expenses by College Board region

The organization of the College Board is divided into six regional areas. The states composing each of the regions are shown on the map printed on page 79. There is a difference of $463 in the mean tuition and fee charges at public institutions among the six regions (Table 17); as was the case last year, the highest charges are reported in the Middle States, and the lowest in the West. Among the various regions the maximum differences in mean tuition and fee charges for private institutions is $1,139, as was the case last year: the New England region reports the highest charges, and the Southwest the lowest. For proprietary institutions the highest tuition and fee charges are found in the West; the lowest, in the Midwest and the South. The difference in costs between public and private institutions is largest in the New England region ($2,452), followed by the West ($2,437), and is smallest in the Southwest ($1,579). The relative position of the regions remains the same this year as last regarding tuition and fees at public and private institutions.

Costs other than tuition and fees for the different regions (Table 18) vary for on-campus resident students by less than $400 from region to region. The average difference among the regions for total expenses minus tuition and fees for 1978-79 is about $534 for off-campus resident students, $278 for commuter students, and $509 for self-supporting students. In the case of resident on-campus students the lowest costs are to be found in the South; the highest, in the West. Residents living in private housing have the highest costs in the West and the lowest costs in the Midwest. Institutions in the Southwest report the highest costs for the commuting student, and those from the West, for self-supporting students.

Expenses at specific institutions

It should be noted that costs listed in this book are averages as reported by postsecondary institutions. As averages, the estimates included here may not be appropriate for the particular circumstances of an individual student. The professional financial aid administrator at each institution, when making an estimate of a student's need, generally starts with an average budget for each type of student. After reviewing the needs of an individual student, a specific budget can then be developed to represent that student's real costs for the year. Such individual budgets may differ from the averages presented in this book.

But the budgets given here can be used for planning purposes. Students who will need financial assistance to meet college costs must plan ahead. One important step is to learn about how the financial aid application process works. As part of the process, many institutions ask students to file a Financial Aid Form (FAF). These are used by institutions in determining the need students have for financial assistance. The FAF is designed to collect information about a family's financial circumstances. A family completes a single form and sends it to the College Scholarship Service, where it is analyzed and a report prepared for every institution and scholarship sponsor named on the form. The CSS also forwards financial information to the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program, if requested to do so. Copies of the FAF are available from guidance counselors in high schools and at community agencies. Following the budget information for most institutions listed in this book is the date by which the institution suggests that the parents send the FAF to the CSS for analysis. The date provided in this publication is intended to assure adequate time for processing by the CSS and for institutional review and award decisions to be made. It should not be interpreted as a deadline date, for many postsecondary institutions may review FAFs filed with the CSS after this date. The date may also differ from the deadlines for financial aid applications, which are published by most institutions in their catalog or financial aid publications. Specific information about the application deadlines of an individual institution can be obtained from its financial aid administrator.

Meeting college costs

The responsibility for meeting postsecondary education costs is shared by the student, his or her parents, the institutions, private donors and agencies, and the various levels of government. This pattern of financing reflects the philosophy that education benefits both the individual and the society. The College Scholarship Service assists institutions and other sources of financial assistance in estimating how much the student and the parents can contribute toward college expenses. This book is intended to assist in estimating what these expenses will be. Using the student expense budgets found in this book and the procedures for determining an estimated family contribution toward postsecondary costs found in the CSS booklet Meeting College Costs, a student can get a rough idea of his or her financial need and eligibility for financial aid. Students who are knowledgeable about postsecondary education costs, the availability of financial aid, and the steps for applying for these funds should have the best chance of attending the institution of their choice.

Institutions' Estimates of Student Expenses

How the data were collected

The data that follow were collected from institutions by the CSS on a form called, "Student Expenses Guidance Information—Academic Year 1978-79." The CSS mailed this form to institutions in December 1977, asking each one to review the information on file for that institution and then to enter data for 1978-79. The listing of institutions includes all those submitting data by January 16, 1978. Those institutions that reported data for the 1977-78 academic year but have not submitted information for 1978-79 are indicated with an asterisk (*). It should be noted that costs may be expected to be higher than shown at these institutions.

The analyses found in the introduction to this book are based only on those institutions providing 1978-79 data for undergraduate students. The number of institutions providing data varies somewhat from year to year, and this variation should be noted when interpreting these data. For 1978-79 there were 1,555 institutions included in the analyses. The distribution of institutions by type and control is similar to that reported in last year's book and in the Education Directory: Colleges and Universities 1975-76 (Table 19).

Definition of terms

In an effort to collect comparable budget information for guidance purposes, the CSS asked institutions to provide information for specifically defined budget items. Thus the figures supplied under each column heading for the institutions listed should represent the following information.

Column 1: Tuition and fees
This figure indicates the tuition and general fees an institution charges to all first-year full-time students based on a nine-month academic year.

Column 2: Resident room and board
This figure is the charge to a dependent resident student living in institutional housing for room and meals for nine months.

Columns 3-5: Student budgets
Total budget expenses are given for three categories of students: resident in both institutional housing and private housing, and commuter (those living at home). Generally each budget total includes tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, transportation, and personal expenses. If an institution did not supply figures for all five components, a total figure is still given if figures were provided for the first two components and at least one of the last three components.

Institutions were requested to submit information only when it applied to their students. For example, if an institution has only commuter students, the resident columns should be blank. When an institution has a range of expenses for any one category—for example, transportation expenses for commuter students—the average expense figure was requested.

For all categories of students, three components of the total budget are defined in the same way:
Tuition and fees—As charged to all first-year full-time students based on a nine-month academic year.

Books and supplies—The average cost for a first-year student for a nine-month academic year.

Personal expenses—The average expenditures for such miscellaneous expenses as clothing, laundry, entertainment, incidental meals, medical insurance, and furnishings, as applicable.

The definitions of the other two components vary by student category:

Transportation—For the resident budgets, the cost of two round trips from a student's home to the institution. For the commuter budget, the total costs of transportation to and from the institution during the nine-month period.

Room and board—For the resident institutional-housing budget, the nine-month charges for a student living and eating in facilities operated by the institution. For the resident private-housing budget, the nine-month expenses for dependent students maintaining a residence away from their parents in privately owned housing. For the commuter budget, the nine-month expenses of food for dependent students who live at home with their parents.

Column 6: Additional out-of-state (district) tuition

This item represents only the additional charge made to students who do not meet state (or district in the case of two-year community colleges) residence requirements.

Column 7: FAF filing date

The last column gives the date by which an institution suggests that students send the FAF to the CSS for analysis.
